

*Why don't ants get fat?
They often go to the park
And eat all the picnics
Their only enemy, the aardvark
But when's the last time
You saw one in a park?
They've always been around
Two were on Noah's ark
With a couple of ants
Noah fed them bark
Then they reproduced
They did it in the dark
Noah exclaimed in surprise
Shouting heavenward, "Hark!"
The birds were all singing
Including a little lark
We have another Orycteropus!
Let's name him Mark!
But in all the excitement
In a moment now stark
He fell overboard
And was eaten by a shark
So when you see ants
Eating in the park
Just remember Noah
And an aardvark named Mark*

Remembering Mark
